Authors and Contributors

Lucy Bei is a second-year undergraduate student at The Australian National University studying a Bachelor of Politics, Philosophy and Economics and a Bachelor of Languages. Her main interests concern economic policy-making both in an international and environmental capacity.

Anna Coote is a second-year undergraduate student at The Australian National University who is studying a double degree of Laws / Politics, Philosophy and Economics. This study combination has given Anna a keen interest in the ethical and political dimensions of the law. Anna has channeled her political interest into working as an Electorate Officer for Julian Leeser MP, Member for Berowra. Anna is now serving as an Academic Network Coordinator for the 2019 Burgmann Law Cohort and as the Resident Representative to the College Board.

Freya Cox studies Law, Chinese, and International Relations at The Australian National University. She is in her first-year. She is passionate about creative writing and tries to still find time to write something more interesting than law essays. She enjoys travelling and writing about other cultures.

Haikun Huang is currently in his penultimate year of the Juris Doctor program at The Australian National University. Prior to commencing at the ANU, Haikun completed a Bachelor of Arts at the University of New South Wales, majoring in history. His research interests include public law, national security law and human rights law.

Greta Kerr is a second-year undergraduate student studying Arts with a major in English. Her writing has been published globally in the New York Times, and can also be seen in the 2017 edition of the Burgmann Journal.

Kieran Knox is a second-year undergraduate student currently in the midst of a degree transfer to International Relation and Anthropology. Whilst of a deep love for creative writing, Kieran has also dabbled in theatre, polaroid photography, as well calligraphy and botanical gardening. His love of these, often eccentric hobbies, is only eclipsed by his love of his faithful typewriter named Maria.

Tom Nobes is in his third year studying a Bachelor of Laws / Bachelor of International Security Studies. Tom has a special interest in National Security Law, which led him to undertake research on the origins of the National Intelligence Community. This interest is reflected in Tom's essay, which examines the legislative responses to the Royal Commission on Intelligence and Security and the Royal Commission on Australia's Security and Intelligence Agencies.

Stella Slack is a second-year undergraduate student studying Law and International Security. In addition to her love of creative writing, she is passionate about travel, conflict resolution in the Middle East, and advocacy in her position as the 2019 Women's Officer.

Samuel Saunders graduated in 2018 with a LLB (First Class Honours); Bachelor of Economics degree. He is passionate about public and private international law. He is currently a Tipstaff at the Court of Appeal in New South Wales.

Eliza Williams is in her second-year of a double degree in Law and Art History and Curatorship (with a minor in visual art). She believes that art and law are the same in the sense that they both try to condense broad and complex ideas into something tangible. Eliza is particularly interested in the ways in which art and law interact, and how art can be used to make difficult or complex subject matter more accessible, to generate social change and to influence policy.
