

Authors / Contributors

Anna Coote is a first-year undergraduate student who is studying a double degree of Laws/Politics, Philosophy and Economics at The Australian National University. Her study of the Cold War is a natural area of study for Anna, as it combines two of her favourite topics: modern history and politics. The latter is a particular passion which has led Anna to working for her local Federal Member, the Hon. Julian Leeser MP.

Kate Garrow is a second-year undergraduate student undertaking an Arts/Law degree with a major in English literature and a minor in Anthropology at The Australian National University. As her degree suggests, Kate loves to read and write.

Clare Green is a second-year undergraduate student studying a Bachelor of International Relations at The Australian National University. Her main interest is foreign policy, specifically counter-terrorism.

Tiger Lin is a first-year student studying a Bachelor of Laws/Politics, Philosophy and Economics at The Australian National University. He is very passionate about philosophy and hopes it will guide him through a future in politics.

Kevin Xu has completed his Master of Environmental and Resource Economics at the Crawford School of Public Policy. In his degree, he has researched the impact of Indonesia's BLT unconditional cash transfer program on children's educational outcomes, the plans and promises of China and India's electricity sectors, and reforming the National Electricity Market to better support a renewable energy future.

Tanika Sibal is a second-year undergraduate student studying Asian Studies/Law at The Australian National University. Due to her own Indian cultural background, she holds a strong interest in the topic of women's rights in India and the influence the Western world has had upon it.

Aislinn Grimley is a first-year undergraduate student undertaking an Arts/Law degree at The Australian National University. Outside of her degree, Aislinn keeps engaged with her creative pursuits in writing and music.

Greta Kerr is a second-year student studying an Arts/Politics, Philosophy and Economics degree at The Australian National University. Her passion for creative writing accompanies her other interests of socks and napping.

Liam Fitzpatrick is a third-year Law/Arts student who is majoring in Political Science and English at The Australian National University. He has written as a Regular Columnist for the ANU student newspaper, Woroni, for the Kimberly Community Legal Service in their submissions to the Royal Commission into Youth Deaths and has represented Australia in public speaking in Lithuania. He is a firm believer in the power of the written and spoken word, and, in the current social and political context, tries to write with urgency, fervour and unashamed divisiveness.

Rose Morgan is a first-year student undertaking a Bachelor of Fine Arts/Arts majoring in Photography at The Australian National University. She is hoping her skills in photography will enable her to pursue further study in Film.

Daniel Cordeschi is a first-year undergraduate student studying a Bachelor of Finance, Economics and Statistics at The Australian National University. While he loves dealing with numbers in his degree, he finds painting a nice change from the norm and uses it as a form of release.

Eliza Williams is a first-year student studying a degree of Law/Art History and Curatorship at The Australian National University. She enjoys drawing, particularly with the freedom of digital illustration, and her preferred subject matter is people and portraiture.

Clive You is a third-year Burgmann resident and honours student at The Australian National University. He was studying Art History and Finance, and he is writing an honours thesis in marketing.